Philadelphia String Quartet To Appear

The world-famous Philadelphia String Quartet will appear on the Summer Music Series this Thursday at 8:15 p.m. in the deJong Concert Hall.

For many years in Philadelphia, the Quartet was heard each month at the Philadelphia Museum of Art, where they were the first quartet ever to be designated Quartet-in-Residence. From 1961 through 1965 they were Artists-in-Residence at University of Pennsylvania.

CARNEGIE HALL

In the 1963-64 season, the Quartet performed an epic six concert Beethoven-Bartok-Schoenberg cycle in Carnegie Recital Hall. In the 1965-66 season they performed there again, in a series of four concerts featuring contemporary music from Hungary, Poland, Norway, and Holland, including many works never before heard in the United States.

In 1964 the Quartet made its first tour of Europe, performing in England, Holland, Denmark, Germany, and Austria. As a result of the tremendous critical acclaim received on this trip, the Quartet was invited by the United States State Department, in 1965, to make an even more extensive tour of the major musical centers of Europe. In 1966 they performed in South America under the auspices of the State Department.

TEACH MUSIC

The Philadelphia String Quartet has also become well known for its extensive teaching activities. During past summers they have been Quartet-in-Residence at the Allegheny Music Festival, National Music Camp at Interlochen, Michigan, and University of Rhode Island Summer Workshop where they performed, taught, and coached Chamber Music.

Free Press vs Fair Trial...

What Should Lawyers Tell the Papers?

The problem of "free press, fair trial" has been a delicate issue ever since the inception of democratic governments, but never has the question been as sharply in focus as it is today.

The American Bar Association will hold its annual convention in Honolulu from August 1 to August 19. One of the main items on its agenda is to decide whether or not to adopt the recommendations of the controversial "Reardon Report" to place stringent regulations on press coverage of criminal cases.

"HOTTEST" ISSUES

"Issues and Answers," ABC News' weekly network radio and television interview program which devotes its sessions to the "hottest" news issues of the day, will examine on its presentation on Sunday, August 6, the "free press, fair trial" question.

Moving its cameras and microphones to Honolulu, "Issues and Answers" that day will present a discussion of the problem by three of the leading experts on the subject.

Justice Paul C. Reardon of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, chaired the committee which prepared the "Reardon Report."

J. Edward Murray, Managing Editor of the Phoenix Republic, who is the Chairman of the Freedom of Information Committee of the American Society of Newspaper Editors; and Bruce Dennis of WGN-TV, Chicago, President of the Radio-Television News Directors Association.

EVALUATE FINDINGS

Interviewed by ABC News' Rowland, Political Editor William H. Lawrence, the panelists will present their positions on the "free press, fair trial" issue and present their evaluations of the "Reardon Report" findings.

The "free press, fair trial" problem has long been the center of controversy among journalists and members of the legal profession. U.S. Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black described the problem when he said:

"Free speech and fair trial are two of the most cherished policies in our civilization and it would be a trying task to choose between them."

REPORT REVEALS IMPACT

The 226-page "Reardon Report" was based on a 20-month study of the impact of crime news coverage by the press and broadcast media on the processes of justice. Conducted under the auspices of the American Bar Association, the study owes its origin in part to recommendations of the Warren Commission following the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

The committee, composed of ten prominent lawyers and judges under the chairmanship of Justice Reardon, recommended that court and police officers withhold from news and broadcast media "potentially prejudicial" information from the time a suspect is arrested until his conviction or acquittal.

PART OF ETHICS

If approved by the American Bar Association at its August meetings in Honolulu, and then adopted by the various state bar associations, the withholding restrictions would become part of the lawyers' canon of ethics, enforceable under the threat of disbarment.

The "Reardon Report" has drawn fire from much of the press and from some some members of the legal profession. Judge Harold Medina of New York City and other jurists across the nation have protested the "Reardon Report" proposals, fearing that an imposed silence might hinder rather than help the rendering of justice.

Mr. Murray, addressing the American Society of Newspaper Editors meeting in Washington this April, expressed the belief that of justice withholding of information, as proposed by the "Reardon Report," would amount to illegal prior censorship. This stand has been widely supported by members of the journalistic profession.

REPRESENTATIVE OF MEDIA

Elmer W. Lower, President of ABC News, will attend the American Bar Association convention in Honolulu as a representative of the broadcast news media. Mr. Lower has been traveling throughout the nation, speaking before various groups, university and legal groups on the dangers of the "Reardon Report" recommendations.

In a speech before the Utah Bar Association in Park City this past June 23, Mr. Lower called on members of the legal profession to cooperate with newsmen in the effort to "free press, fair trial" in order to avoid a "major case at the highest judicial level" which could only "embitter press-bar relations for years."

Mr. Lower, citing numerous U.S. Supreme Court decisions, took issue with the findings of the controversial "Reardon Report" which said, "envisions a series of restraints on what prosecutors, police and lawyers can tell the press about a particular case both before and during the trial."

HOPES FOR UNDERSTANDING

"My hope and wish," Mr. Lower said, "has been to get press and bar together to establish some kind of mutual understanding of each other's problems, and the way each establishment views the constitutional rights of Americans."

"Issues and Answers" will originate from Honolulu through the facilities by ABC affiliate KHVH. It is produced by Peggy Whedon of ABC News.

Conservationists Suggest Closing "Knowledge Gap" To Gain Greater Progress

Closing the "knowledge gap" in natural resource conservation would lead to greater progress toward conservation goals, a petroleum industry spokesman suggested recently.

The speaker was Millard E. Stone of Denver, chairman of the American Petroleum Institute's Committee on Public Affairs. He also is a vice president and director of the Sinclair Oil Corporation. Addressing the Interstate Oil Compact Commission's midyear meeting at Denver, Colo., Stone said conservationists, industry and government agree on goals, but lack a knowledge gap when it comes to developing ways to reach those objectives.

MAXIMUM PROBLEMS

"In our hurry to deal with a multitude of conservation problems," he commented, "we are frequently tempted to take action before all the necessary facts are assembled. And it seems to me we are tempted to ignore the knowledge we've already acquired as to the best routes to conservation goals."

He said petroleum companies have pioneered many of the water conservation measures developed in the past few decades and that these companies are tackling air conservation problems with the investment of millions of dollars in equipment and research.

To meet these "staggering demands," it has been estimated that the U.S. oil industry must raise $75 billion in the coming decade for capital expenditures. Stone reported, he noted, is a sum 18 times greater than the industry's after-tax profits in 1965.

IMPROVEMENT CALLED FOR

Narrowing the "capital gap" between the amounts petroleum companies must spend and what they can generate through their operations "will call for an improvement in the return on investment," Stone said. "It will require us, as companies, to effect every possible efficiency and economy in our own operations. It will also require equitable tax policies and improved regulations on our many products."

Information Explosion Produces Needs For Efficiency In Handling

A research program designed to devise better ways of coping with the information explosion—especially a body of scientific literature that doubles in size every 8 to 10 years—was announced today by the U.S. Office of Education.

In announcing the new $3.5 million Library and Information Sciences Research Program, the Office pointed out that the information boom and greatly expanded use of libraries of all types had placed a demand on the Nation's library and information resources that could no longer be met efficiently with present methods and facilities.

NEW PROJECTS

The new research program is authorized under Title II of the Higher Education Act of 1965. Thirty-eight projects are being undertaken by university and college libraries, libraries, and organizations in 10 States and the District of Columbia.

Examples of the projects are:—Hamline College, Amherst, Mass., which will open its doors to students in 1970, will attempt to design a program for its students that will use computers and "dial-access" communication systems to bring library services to their dormitory rooms.

—Researchers at the University of Maryland, College Park, Md., will explore future library manpower needs and attempt to devise methods of selection, recruitment, training and utilization of personnel to satisfy the increasing demands of information centers and libraries.

—The Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., will seek to develop a computerized system for the management of biological and geological specimens in order to make them more readily available to students at all levels and to specialists in the subject areas.

MAXIMUM SERVICES

—A research-demonstration project will be set up in Detroit, Mich., to investigate the problems of providing maximum library services to people in a rapidly expanding metropolitan area.

—An investigation of the current situation regarding the relationship of copyright law to the requirements of present and future information dissemination systems. The study, to be undertaken by researchers in Washington, D.C., will attempt to develop a better accommodation between copyright law and information technology.

Onward and Upward!...

Annual Timp Hike Is Friday

Activities for the annual Timp Hike August 5 will begin with a program Aug. 4 at 8 p.m. in Aspen Grove.

Following a brief welcome by Dr. Israel Heslov, hike chairman, and Clarence Thorneok of the U.S. Forest Service, a program featuring variety numbers by the BYU Program Bureau, community singing led by Dr. Harold A. Goodman, of the BYU Music Department, and the traditional legend of Timpanogos portrayed in song and dance will be presented.

A special feature this year for those hikers who reach the summit will be the awarding of free swim and ride passes to Saratoga Amusement Park in addition to the traditional Summit Bages.

Extensive plans have been made for security, crowd control, parking, highway safety and general safety. Departments involved include the Utah Highway Patrol, Utah County Sheriff's Department, Jeep Patrol, U.S. Forest Service, BYU Security Police, explorer posts and for the first time this year, members of the Timp Haven Ski Patrol.

The BYU Health Center and the Alpine Club will be in charge of first aid on the hike. The Alpine Club, under the direction of Steven Petersen, will provide rescue service, should a hiker become injured or stranded.

Members of the Highway Patrol will check the road Friday evening and on Saturday. In addition, several officers will patrol Aspen Grove throughout Friday evening. The Sheriff's posse, mounted on horseback, will be in charge of parking cars in the proper areas.

Contracts to improve the trail have been released for two previous summers. "By the end of this summer there will be an excellent trail almost to the top of the mountain," said Lyle Smith, branch chief of recreational lands of Utah National Forest.

Work crews from Pleasant Grove are working to remove the water from the trail after the heavy winter snow fall. "This is the slowest they have had this late in the season on Timp trail," he said. "There will be a lot of snowfields on the hike this year."
